

The Stoop Storytelling Series and the Baltimore Museum of Industry will present “Workin’ It: Stories about Making a Living in Baltimore” on Thursday, May 3, 2018 at the Baltimore Museum of Industry.

For this show, we’re seeking seven storytellers to share a story about a particular job, occupation, or aspect of their work life. We define “work” broadly and we’re open to stories about everything from day jobs to driving Uber, unpaid internships, first jobs, domestic labor, lifelong avocations, to military posts, working in the underground economy, sex work and sexual harassment in the workplace.

Stories can be funny, sad, serious — or all three. As long as they’re true, and they capture the adventures, challenges, joy, or surrealism of working in Baltimore, we’re all ears.

Got a tale to tell? Here’s how it works.

1. Submit a three-sentence summary of your story in this online form: bit.ly/StoopBMI. Be sure to include a beginning, middle, and end of your tale.
2. We’ll select seven storytellers to share their tale at the show. These folks will receive support in shaping their story during a coaching session with Stoop Storytelling Series producers.
3. Storytellers will share their seven-minute tales at the show on May 3, 2018. Stories will be recorded and housed on the BMI website and The Stoop site — and possibly played on The Stoop podcast.

Remember: This is a storytelling event — not a TED talk, academic lecture, or reading. The stories will be shared with audience as if with a group of friends. No notes, no memorizing!

Visit stoopstorytelling.com to listen to Stoop stories and subscribe to The Stoop Podcast.