BMI Appoints New Development Director and Trustees

Representatives from aviation, defense, real estate, tech and shipping sectors join board

BALTIMORE, MARYLAND – The Baltimore Museum of Industry (BMI) announces the appointment of five new members to its board of trustees and a new director of development to its staff.

The new trustees include:

Deepak Jain, founder and CEO of AiNET, an IT services provider with headquarters in Beltsville. A Maryland native, Mr. Jain received his bachelor's degree in Molecular Biology from Johns Hopkins University.

Chineta Kennedy Davis, retired from Northrop Grumman Corporation and now with the Maryland Aviation Commission.

Matt Lenihan, Assistant Vice President of Leasing at St. John Properties. He lives in Federal Hill with his family.

Patricia Newby, retired executive from Northrop Grumman Corporation who now presides over Strategic Business Partnerships, a business coaching and consulting company. She lives in Federal Hill.

Sara Scarfo, Director of Business Development at Bentley World Packaging. She lives in Severna Park.

The BMI welcomed Deborah Cardin in January as Director of Development. Deborah joins the BMI after 17 years at the Jewish Museum of Maryland, where she held various senior level positions overseeing fundraising initiatives, education programs, and exhibition development, including serving as the museum's assistant director for three years. She currently serves as chair of the board of the Council of American Jewish Museums as well as a board member of the Maryland Association of Museums. Deborah and her husband Jonathan Willis, a high school English teacher, live with their two daughters in the Mt. Washington area of Baltimore.
